Haematology

Test Name	Result	Unit	Biological Reference Interval
Method : Photometry, Hemoglobin Electrochemical impedance - RBC count, Total leucocyte count, Platelet count Electrochemical impedance & Absorbance - Differential count Centrifuged - PCV/HCT, MCV, MCH, MCHC, RDW, CV, MPV Absolute count.

Serology

Test Name	Result	Unit	Biological Reference Interval
CRP - C Reactive Protein Method : Turbidimetric	3.6	mg/L	< 5.0 mg/L

NOTE

- 1) C-reactive protein (CRP) is a protein found in the blood, the levels of which rise in response to inflammation (an acute phase protein).
- 2) Its physiological role is to bind to phospholipids expressed on the surface of dead or dying cells (and some types of bacteria) in order to activate the complement system via C3q. CRP is synthesized by the liver in response to factors released by cells (cytokines).
- 3) It is a member of the pentamer family of proteins. It is unrelated to C-peptide or protein C. CRP is used mainly as a marker of inflammation. Apart from liver failure, there are few known factors that interfere with CRP production.
- 4) Monitoring and charting CRP values can prove useful in determining disease progress or the effectiveness of treatments.
- 5) CRP is therefore a test of value in medicine, reflecting the presence and intensity of inflammation, although an elevation in C-reactive protein is not the reliable diagnostic sign of any one condition.
- 6) Reference Range: Newborns: 0 days: <0.6 mg/L 1 day: <1.2 mg/L 1 week: <1.6 mg/L
